Friend --

The First Lady knows exactly how important the grassroots work we're doing is.

If you haven't responded to her question yet, take a minute -- answer this one-question survey and let us know what gets you fired up:

Friend --

You can't just want change.

You've got to fight for it, too. Barack and I hear that's exactly what you're doing -- thank you.

This work matters. Just look at the August congressional recess: For the first time in a long time, our side built some real momentum over the summer -- on everything from immigration reform to climate change. That's all you.

You're the heart and soul of this organization. That's why OFA wants to hear directly from you.

So, if you had to pick, what is the number one issue that drives you to keep fighting?

I had the privilege of helping get Organizing for Action off the ground earlier this year, and I'm excited about where you're taking it.

There's a lot of work still ahead. As Barack says: Winning an election doesn't bring about the change we seek. It simply gives us the chance to make that change.

You're embracing that opportunity -- and all Americans will be better off for it.

Thanks,

Michelle
